WAR CRY: Ard Choille (High Wood).

BADGE: Guithas (Pine Tree).

MOTTO: 'S Rioghail mo dhream (Royal is my Race).

SALUTE: Failte Chlann Ghriogair (MacGregor's Salute).

CLAN PIPE MUSIC: Ruaig Ghlinne Fraoine (The Chase of Glen Fruin).

The MacGregor is a clan of ancient lineage which, according to its motto, claims royal descent, its progenitor being Gregor, or Greg, third son of Alpin, King of the Scots, and brother of Kenneth MacAlpin, King of Scotland. The name is derived from the Latin Gregorius. The earliest possessions of the clan were in Glen Orchy, or Glenorchy, in Argyll, where, from the fourteenth century, they made their graves in the small chapel of Dysart, near Dalmally. Their lands had doubtless been given to them by kinsmen who were lords of the land before the days of charters. Thus, when new proprietors armed with grants from a different line of kings came flourishing fresh titles, the original inhabitants could not understand the value of the "bits of parchment," and strove to assert "coir a' chlaidheigh," or right of the sword. So began a series of feuds and of armed resistance, which other causes fostered and which lasted for centuries. Powerful and treacherous neighbors found means to usurp the MacGregor lands by royal grants and carried to the ears of the sovereign the worst accounts of the conduct of the oppressed clan, which, in fighting for its own homes, used violence to meet violence and craft and whose members had no respite or opportunity of leading more peaceful lives given them. Persecution only increased their courage and their endurance. As Sir Walter Scott wrote: "They were famous for their misfortunes and the indomitable courage with which they maintained themselves as a clan."

The lands of Glen Orchy passed away by the marriage of an heiress, after which MacGregor of Glenstrae exercised the chiefship for several centuries. In 1603 a conflict took place between the Clan Gregor and the Colquhouns of Luss, who were not hereditary enemies, but who had been induced to endeavor to execute a commission of "fire and sword" issued by King James VI against the dreaded clan. The battle was fought at Glenfruin in January 1603, and the result was a decisive victory for the MacGregors, who followed the Colquhouns into their own territory. The authorities were so incensed that they aimed at the annihilation of the whole clan. Alexander MacGregor, the chief, was eventually apprehended and, with many of his followers, executed at Edinburgh in 1604. He left no descendants, but the line continued in sons of his brother John, who was slain at Glenfruin, where his able tactics had contributed largely to the victory. His eldest son was eventually induced to sell Stronmelochan, the last remaining portion of the Glenstrae property, to Campbell of Glen Orchy, but the line did not become extinct until 1706, when MacGregor of Ard-choille, of the house of Ladasach, descended from Gregor Aluinn, the original stem, became chief, although landless. MacGregor of Roro, the oldest cadet of the clan, is mentioned early in the fifteenth century.

The very name MacGregor was absolutely proscribed after Glenfruin under the most severe penalties, and members of the clan had to adopt other names, among which Gregg was common. Some of these Greggs removed to Ireland in the seventeenth century. An Act to annul the suppression of the name was passed by Parliament in November 1774, but many of the clan failed to resume the old name.

CHAPTER I

THE HISTORY OF THE

REIGN OF

CHARLES THE FIRST

BY

JOHN BURNET

The first of the reign of Charles the first was a year of great calamity to the kingdom. The king was at the head of a party which was determined to maintain the royal prerogative against the claims of parliament. The king was a man of great abilities and great courage, but he was also a man of great pride and great ambition. He was determined to rule the kingdom as he saw fit, and he was not willing to be controlled by any other body. This led to a series of conflicts with parliament, which culminated in the execution of the king in 1649. The reign of Charles the first was a period of great controversy and great bloodshed. David Gregg was made a captain in Cromwell's Army about 1650 and was sent into northern Ireland in 1655 to help protect the Protestants and put down the Catholic uprisings. Under the name Gregg, he colonized some of the clan around Londonderry, and he was in that city during its siege from April to August 1689. After the siege, he and his wife were visiting their son John at Coleraine, a suburb of Londonderry, when they were surprised by a band of Catholics led by his own servant and all three were killed.

When, after the siege of Londonderry in 1689, John Gregg and his parents were surprised and killed by a band of Catholics, his wife and children were absent and escaped death. Rigorous laws relating to religion and a big rise in rents and taxes influenced his children other than John to emigrate to America.

Recovery, O., on 4 Nov. 1791 and participated in Wayne's victory at the Battle of Fallen Timbers on the Maumee on 24 Aug. 1794.

29. ELIZABETH⁵ GREGG, b. 15 Apr. 1763; m. Valentine Nichols.

Samuel Gregg is said to have been born in 1699, to have come to Philadelphia in 1711 at the age of 12, to have moved to Loudoun County, Virginia, in 1720 at the age of 21, and to have died at the age of 103. Whatever his dates, he settled in Fairfax County, Virginia, in an area that became a part of Loudoun County in 1757. In 1773 he and his wife Esther were witnesses to a sale of land in Loudoun County by Francis Baldwin to Robert Asher, and he was listed in 1793-4 as the owner of 190 acres of land in that county.

He was not a Quaker, but in Loudoun and Fairfax Counties he was surrounded by Quaker neighbors, as the Hanby, Nixon, Roach, Gregg, Hackney, Tribbey, Lovett, McFarlin, Todhunter, Harlan, and Wilkinson families. Seven of his children married Quaker Greggs, and some of them joined the Society of Friends. His place of burial is unknown, but a small stone in the Fairfax Monthly Meeting graveyard at Waterford, Virginia, bearing only the initials "S G" might possibly mark his grave.

Samuel Gregg has no issue by his second marriage, but it gave him ten step-children: Sarah Masterson and George, William, Mary, Joseph, Lydia, Robert, Ruth (born 1769), Naomi, and Rosannah Tobin. In his will, he left to his wife Esther some stock and much of the household furniture, as well as the remainder of a lease granted to her former husband by John Tayloe, Esq., and left to her by his will for raising and educating their children. He then directed the sale of the remainder of the estate and the division of the proceeds into ten equal shares for dis-

The will was witnessed by Uriah Williams and James, Richard, George, and John Roach, and the executors were son Thomas Gregg, son-in-law William Gregg, and friend James McIlheney. In the settlement in December 1805, Joseph Tribbey received 18 shillings "for writing 3 days at the sale."

He appears in the census of 1790 as head of a family of 2 males over 16, 2 males under 16, and 4 females. His 2nd wife is not named nor are her children given, but Crumrine's History of Washington County says that "He also had quite a large family of children by his second marriage, all of whom eventually went West." Thomas Gregg became a member of the Society of Friends in 1776, and he and his wife Amy were certified to the Hopewell Monthly Meeting in 1782. They had removed from their Shenandoah Valley home in Loudoun County, Virginia, and had settled on Dunlap's Creek, one mile from Brownsville, Fayette County, Pennsylvania, at a time when the Indians were still hostile, often raiding the settlements and making them, including the Greggs, flee to Rickett's Fort, near the site of Merrittstown, for protection. Thomas and Amy Gregg were in the fort on one occasion when a man named Morgan was attacked by two Indians a short distance from the blockhouse. Morgan killed both, and the soldiers in the fort skinned the dead bodies and tanned the skins to make sword belts. Thomas Gregg and his wife gave the ground for the first Friends' Church west of the mountains. His will, dated 16 June 1820 and proved 25 October 1821, provided for his wife Amy, each of his surviving children, and the children of his deceased sons and mentioned several of his granddaughters, including Mary and Caroline, daughters of Dinah Gregg. Although, as a good Quaker, he could not condone the divorce of his eldest son Nimrod or recognize his second marriage, he named him as one of his two executors and he included in the will a legacy to certain grandsons, "including an illegitimate child now in the family of my son Nimrod Gregg," meaning, of course, the child of Nimrod's second wife.

After the death of her husband, Amy Gregg moved to Preble County, Ohio, to live with her niece Mary Laning, who must have been a daughter of Lydia Howell, the only one of Amy's brothers and sisters to settle in Preble County, although a sister had long before gone to Warren County, not far distant from Preble County. John Gregg seems to have died, and Dinah Gregg may also have done so, although she was living when her father drew up his will in 1820. So, Amy Gregg, considering her age, could have taken her grandchildren to Ohio only in the company of some one, most likely the Howells. Silas Gregg, probable uncle of the children, may have been with them, but it would seem more probable that he had gone to Preble County at an earlier date. In 1828, Amy Gregg affiliated with the Elk Monthly Meeting at or near West Elkton, in the southern part of Preble County, as, most likely, did all of the Howells and Greggs in the vicinity.

Thomas Gregg became a member of the Society of Friends in 1776, and he and his wife Amy were certified to the Hopewell Monthly Meeting in 1782. They had removed from their Shenandoah Valley home in Loudoun County, Virginia, and had settled on Dunlap's Creek, one mile from Brownsville, Fayette County, Pennsylvania, at a time when the Indians were still hostile, often raiding the settlers and making them, including the Greggs, flee to Rickett's Fort, near the site of Merrittstown, for protection. Thomas and Amy Gregg were in the fort on one occasion when a man named Morgan was attacked by two Indians a short distance from the blockhouse. Morgan killed both, and the soldiers in the fort skinned the dead bodies and tanned the skins to make sword belts. Thomas Gregg and his wife gave the ground for the first Friends' Church west of the mountains. His will, dated 16 June 1820 and proved 25 October 1821, provided for his wife Amy, each of his surviving children, and the children of his deceased sons and mentioned several of his granddaughters, including Mary and Caroline, daughters of Dinah Gregg. Although, as a good Quaker, he could not condone his eldest son's divorce or recognize his second marriage, he named his son Nimrod as one of his two executors, and he included in the will a legacy to certain grandsons, "including an illegitimate child now in the family of my son Nimrod Gregg," meaning, of course, the child of Nimrod's second wife.

After the death of her husband, Amy Gregg moved to Ohio to live with her niece Mary Laning, whose parentage is not given. Of Amy's brothers and sisters, Lydia (Gregg) Howell seems to have been the only one to move to Ohio, so it is likely that she was the mother of Mary Laning, and it is also likely that Amy Gregg went to Ohio with the Howells. We know nothing of the movements of John and Dinah (Gregg) Gregg, but Dinah was living when her father drew up his will in 1820. It is therefore quite possible that her children and perhaps she herself (with her husband or as a widow) went to Ohio with the Howells and her mother. The Howells and Greggs being all Quakers, they very likely affiliated with the Monthly Meeting at or near West Elkton, in the southern part of Preble County, Ohio.

John Gregg, having married into a Quaker family, became a member of the Society of Friends in Loudoun County, Virginia, on 25 March 1775. However, he entered military service on 25 November 1775 and was promptly disowned by the Quakers. He served as a private in Captain Thomas Gaddis's company of Virginia Militia. Some time afterward, he and his wife Sarah, a beautiful woman of light frame, weighing only about ninety pounds, moved from their Virginia home to Washington County, Pennsylvania, and settled in an area that became a part of Greene County when that county was formed. On 2 December 1783 John Gregg (spelled Grigg in the Washington County records) and his wife Sarah, of Amwell township, Washington County, appointed Laughlin McIntosh, of Loudoun County, Virginia, their attorney to proceed against Alexander Lithgow, of Prince William County, Virginia, in the matter of a sale of land in Prince William County, and on 29 June 1784 they gave him power of attorney to complete the sale. On 26 September 1785 John Gregg received a warrant for a tract of 312 acres of land called Red Thorn Bottom, on Ten Mile (Tenmile) Creek, adjoining Israel Gregg, Sarah Gregg, and others; and Sarah Gregg received a warrant for a tract of 266¹/₂ acres called Equipage, adjoining John Gregg. Another John Gregg, who owned land on Pike Run and lived at this time in Followfield township, Washington County, with his first wife Ellenor, was of a different family, brother of Henry and William Gregg, all immigrants to Washington County.

In 1792 John Gregg moved down the Ohio River to Kentucky, landing at Limestone, now Maysville, in Mason County, where he and his wife became Methodists. He bought, as he supposed, the Neville Bottom, something like a thousand acres on the Ohio side of the river, not far above Moscow. Here, in the summer of 1795, he, John Buchanan and his wife, and another man made the first attempt at a settlement in this area. He began to improve the property and to build cabins, but when he had a survey made he found that his actual purchase was some very inferior land on Anderson's Bottom, below Neville. He declined the purchase and went to Warren County, where he bought some land near Lebanon. While preparing to build a cabin on it, he became ill and returned to his cabin near Neville, where he died.

Nimrod Gregg inherited a large tract of land in Preston County, West Virginia, which he used for grazing. He bought 103 acres in Luzerne township, Fayette County, Pennsylvania, in 1801, 1,200 acres on the headwaters of Muddy Creek in 1812, and 100 acres on Muddy Creek in 1815. He was expelled from the Quaker Church in 1823 for divorcing his wife and marrying another woman. It is said that Katie (Johnson) Gregg advertised in a local newspaper that her husband had left her bed and board, that he was living in the mountains with a mistress, and that if he ever showed up at her house she would throw hot water on him. In his will, Nimrod Gregg divided his West Virginia lands among his sons Jehu and Elihu, his daughters Sidney and Lydia, and a child of his deceased daughter Zillah. His eldest son Bani, having already been given his share in Pennsylvania lands, was bequeathed one dollar. His youngest son Nimrod was given the home farm of about 120 acres in Luzerne township.

Samuel Gregg was a trader on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to New Orleans, Louisiana. He was on a trip to Kentucky when, as recited in the will of his father, "at the house of one Riley in the State of Ohio, he there departed this life." His children moved to Circleville, Pickaway County, Ohio. After his death, his widow Ann Margaret married Robert Curry and had children: William Curry, Baily Curry, Dorcas Bell, Priscilla Curry, and Sarah Olds, whose husband was a cousin of Joseph Olds⁸ Gregg. Ann Margaret Ball descended from William Ball, who died in 1709, of New Castle County, Delaware, and his wife Esther. Their son John Ball married Catherine Lester and had a son Joseph Ball, who, in 1749, married Sarah ----, born in 1723 and died in 1796. Joseph and Sarah Ball had a son John Ball, born 18 April 1750, who, by his wife Ann ----, born in 1753 and died in March 1847, was the father of Ann Margaret.

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was the cold. It was a sharp contrast to the warm blanket I had been sitting under. I looked up at the sky, which was a pale, hazy blue. The air was crisp and clean, a welcome change from the stuffy atmosphere of the car. I took a deep breath, feeling the cool air fill my lungs. The sun was just beginning to rise, casting a soft, golden glow over the landscape. The trees were bare, their branches reaching out like skeletal fingers against the sky. The ground was covered in a thin layer of frost, glistening in the early morning light. I felt a sense of peace and tranquility, a moment of stillness in a world that was always in motion.

I walked slowly, my boots crunching on the frost. The silence was broken only by the occasional rustle of leaves or the distant call of a bird. I felt a sense of freedom, a sense of being alone in a vast, open world. The cold was not unpleasant, it was invigorating. It reminded me of the winter months, of the quiet beauty of a snowy landscape. I smiled to myself, feeling a sense of contentment. This was exactly what I needed, a moment of solitude and reflection.

The path I was on was well-trodden, the frost having been broken by many feet. I followed it, my eyes scanning the horizon. The landscape was a mix of rolling hills and open fields, some of which were covered in a light snow. The trees were scattered across the landscape, some standing tall and proud, others leaning over like old men. The sky was a mix of blue and white, with soft, wispy clouds. The overall feeling was one of peace and tranquility, a moment of stillness in a world that was always in motion.

I continued to walk, my mind wandering. I thought about the journey I was on, about the challenges I had faced and the triumphs I had achieved. I felt a sense of accomplishment, a sense of having come a long way. The cold was a reminder of the journey, of the challenges I had overcome. It was a testament to my strength and resilience. I smiled, feeling a sense of pride in myself.

The path led me to a small clearing, where a few trees stood in a circle. The ground was covered in a thick layer of snow, and the air was cold. I stopped for a moment, looking up at the sky. The sun was now higher in the sky, casting a bright, golden glow. The trees were bare, their branches reaching out like skeletal fingers against the sky. The ground was covered in a thin layer of frost, glistening in the early morning light. I felt a sense of peace and tranquility, a moment of stillness in a world that was always in motion.

William Gregg, a Quaker farmer, was the founder of this family in America. In 1678, while he was still living in county Waterford in Ireland, William Penn visited that county and converted the Greggs, among others, to Quakerism. After the restoration of Charles II, rigorous laws in restraint of Quakerism induced William Penn to remove to his American Province, whither he was accompanied or soon followed by many other Quakers. Among these were William Gregg and the members of his family, who are said to have been in the original party. Their names do not appear on the available passenger lists of the first ship, the Welcome, which arrived on 28 October 1682, but they may have been on the Caledonia.

In 1683, shortly after his arrival, William Gregg received a grant of 200 acres from Rockland Manor, one of William Penn's principal manors, in the upper part of Christiana Hundred, which later became a part of New Castle County, Delaware; and on 26 January 1684/5 he received a warrant for 400 additional acres, which were surveyed to him on 11 May 1685. Here he built a log cabin on a site that he called Strand Millas, which, with a tract of 150 acres, went to his youngest son Richard when his lands were divided after his widow's death in 1692. William Gregg was a member of Centre Monthly Meeting, together with William Dixon, Alphonseus Kirk, Valentine Harmon, the brothers Michael and George Harlan, and others.

John Gregg is said to have been a friend of William Penn. He came to America with his father at the age of fourteen, and he settled on Red Clay Creek on property received from his father. In a deposition made in 1735, he stated that he was then aged about sixty-seven years and that he had been in New Castle County for about fifty-one years. In 1693, a tract of 200 acres of his father's grant of 1685 was confirmed to him, only to be sold later. By deed of 17 August 1702 he bought from Letitia Penn, only surviving daughter of William Penn, a tract of 200 acres in New Castle County from the 14,500-acre Manor of Staining on the south side of Brandywine Creek that her father had granted to her on 25 Octoner 1701. He took up 300 acres in Chester County, Pennsylvania, in 1703 and 150 acres on the Brandywine and 100 acres adjoining his own property in 1717. Strand Millas and the 150 acres surrounding it went to him at the death of his brother Richard in 1719, but he gave the whole plantation to his brother George in December of the same year. By 1730 he owned some 1,300 acres of land, in which year he gave the Staining Manor tract of 200 acres on Red Clay Creek to his son William for love and affection and five shillings, and he later gave another 200-acre tract on Red Clay Creek to his son Thomas. In his will, he mentioned his wife Elizabeth and his daughters Hannah, Rebecca, and Emey, and he divided his lands among his sons, confirming to sons William and Thomas the tracts that they had already received as their shares.

"Item. I have made over unto William, my eldest son, whom I make one of my Executors, a tract of land containing two hundred acres, lying and being on Red Clay Creek, it being in the County of New Castle, which is his part: ---

"Item. I gave and have made over unto my son Thomas two hundred acres of land, also lying and being on Red Clay Creek, in the County of New Castle, which is his part: ---

"Item. I give and bequeath unto my son Joseph two hundred acres of land, also lying and being on Red Clay Creek, in the County of ---, by him to be possessed and enjoyed by him, his heirs and assigns, forever, it being his part: ---

"Item. I give and bequeath unto my son Samuel, whom I make the other of my Executors, all the tract of land I now live on, being and containing seven hundred acres, or thereabouts, with the improvements thereunto belonging, by him to be possessed and enjoyed by him, his heirs and assigns, forever, it being his part."

George Gregg left New Castle County, Delaware, and settled in Loudoun County, Virginia. His wife and children are named in his will. His father-in-law George Hogg was a cordwainer, or shoemaker, who, by his wife Anne, had children: (i) George Hogg, who married Elizabeth ---- and died in 1748; (ii) George Hogg, who died in 1748 without issue; (iii) James Hogg; and (iv) Sarah Hogg. There was a William Hogg in Northumberland County, Virginia, in 1650; an Andrew Hogg of Virginia in 1653; and a James Hogg in Northampton County, Virginia, in 1655.

William Gregg lived in New Castle County, Delaware, on the 200 acres of land that he had received from his father and on which he built a grist mill, mill race, and mill pond. At his death, the bulk of his holdings went to the eldest son, Harmon, saving only his wife's interest in a part and excluding a parcel of two acres surrounding the grist mill, which he left in equal shares to his four sons. Joshua Gregg sold his quarter interest in 1759 to George and Hannah⁵ Robinson for 60 pounds, who, in turn, sold it in 1761 to Hannah's brother Samuel⁷ Gregg for 67 pounds 5 shillings 6 pence. Harmon Gregg bought out his brothers William and Jacob.

"And as touching my land I divide by a line in the following manner - . . . : I leave two perches along the mill race from end to end, the race being part with two acres, one on each side of the mill for mill land.

"Item. I give to my son Harmon all my land on the North side of the aforesaid division line, with the improvements thereon, to him, his Heirs and assigns forever, except the privileges belonging to my wife, and those hereafter mentioned.

"Item. I give all my land and improvement on the South side of the aforesaid division line to him, his heirs and assigns, forever.

James Gregg, a bleacher of linen cloth, removed from Ayrshire, Scotland, to Mueshkee Parish, county Londonderry, Ireland, and from there he came to America in 1718, arriving at Boston on 4 August on either the Robert or the William. He was among the group of settlers that spent the winter of 1718 on Cape Elizabeth, in Maine, with many privations and much suffering. In October 1718 these settlers petitioned the General Court for land, went to Nutfield about the beginning of April 1719, and settled on West Running Brook, running eastward into Beaver River, with James Gregg in the first group. He had been an apprentice tailor in Scotland, and after his marriage he set up as a linen draper and accumulated much property. Possessed of the means and the disposition, he aided and encouraged the company in their trials and wants. He was captain of a company during the war with eastern Indians in 1719, and he was elected one of the seven selectmen on 20 November 1719 to manage town affairs. The name of Gregg first appeared on the Pedee River in South Carolina in 1752, with the arrival of the Scotch-Presbyterian families of John and Joseph Gregg and of Dr. John Gregg, probably a relative. John Gregg, on 3 July 1752, petitioned Council, stating that he was desirous of settling himself and family in the Province, that his family consisted of himself and wife, one Dutch servant, and five negroes, for whom no grant had been made, and that he was desirous of getting two plots of 500 acres each that had been surveyed for Mr. John Atkins about 1735-1736 and were still lying in the Surveyor-General's office. Altogether, he obtained grants for 1,350 acres. At the same time, Dr. John Gregg petitioned for land further down, in the fork of Black River and the Pedee.

Captain James Gregg, a Whig, lived on Poke Swamp on the west side of the Pedee River. He was a captain in Britton's Neck regiment, Colonel Erwin, in the Revolutionary War. He went to Charleston in 1777, just below the line of St. David's on the west side of the river, in command of a company from "Old Liberty." In 1780 his company formed part of a detachment under Major Thornby that remained at the Ten Mile House, near Charleston, for two months until the term of service of the men expired. When Sir Henry Clinton approached the city, Major Thornby's officers and men volunteered for service in its defence and were in Charleston at its capitulation. In 1782 Captain James Gregg was forced for a considerable time to hide in Poke Swamp, where he slept in a hollow log, being fed by his family, but his house was eventually burned by the Tories and his family turned out of doors.
